Estate Planning for Parents of Children with Autism				https://www.justgreatlawyers.com/estate-planning-for-parents-of-children-with-autism		As people grow older, especially parents, they begin to think about the future, and how their children will be provided for after they're gone. For parents of children without developmental disabilities, this is easier, as those children can typically provide for themselves.
Home Modifications for Autistic Children				http://www.homecity.com/creating-a-home-where-your-child-can-thrive-with-a-disability#Autistic		When your child is disabled, whether because of the way they were born or after an accident or injury, you instantly turn from simply a parent to an advocate. It's your job to give your child the best possible start in life, embracing the different abilities so your child can thrive. However, sometimes this is difficult to do in a traditional home layout. If your child, for example, is in a wheelchair, and you have narrow hallways, then getting around your home may be difficult, if not impossible. Home modifications can help you make your home into a place where your child is safe, comfortable and thriving. At HomeCity, we want to help you with the process of modifying your home. Here are some tips to make it a little easier.
National Autism Center				http://www.nationalautismcenter.org/resources/families/		Being armed with information about autism spectrum disorder (ASD) helps families feel more comfortable as they face new challenges. Some families need to know where to start when one member of the family has been recently diagnosed. Other families face unexpected difficulties as their loved ones with ASD learn to live effectively in home, school, or community settings. We are dedicated to supporting families by making information and resources more readily available.
Operation Autism - A Resource for Military Families				http://www.operationautismonline.org/		Operation Autism directly supports U.S. military families touched by autism and autism spectrum disorders. It serves as an introduction to autism, a guide for the life journey with autism, and a ready reference for available resources, services, and support.
Reduce the "noise" while shopping				https://www.retailmenot.com/blog/sensory-overload-while-shopping.html		You walk around the mall with your child, getting some shopping done and trying to resist the temptation of sales (or even junk food in the food court) when suddenly the bass line of loud music comes blaring from the next store over. Noisy crowds of people rush by you, carrying loud crinkling shopping bags and bursting with explosive laughter, hitting you as they walk by in all directions. You're able to shrug this off as pretty standard and keep going. But when you turn to your kid, you see the panic and pain in their eyes, and you know a meltdown is coming.
Teaching Tips for Children and Adults with Autism				https://www.iidc.indiana.edu/?pageId=601		Good teachers helped me to achieve success. I was able to overcome autism because I had good teachers. At age 2 1/2 I was placed in a structured nursery school with experienced teachers. From an early age I was taught to have good manners and to behave at the dinner table. Children with autism need to have a structured day, and teachers who know how to be firm but gentle.
Sesame Street and Autism				http://autism.sesamestreet.org/		That's why Sesame Workshop created Sesame Street and Autism: See Amazing in All Children, a nationwide initiative aimed at communities with children ages 2 to 5. Developed with input from parents, people who serve the autism community, and people with autism, See Amazing in All Children offers families ways to overcome common challenges and simplify everyday activities. At the same time, the project fosters an affirming narrative around autism for all families and kids.
